THE DEBT OF WEALTH.

No matter what a man has of wealth or power, whether it be large or small, the possession of it makes him a debtor to his generation.

The artist does not paint for his own satisfaction, the singer does not sing for her own entertainment, the preacher does not preach for his own edification, and by the same token the citizen does not exercise his franchise for his own selfish interests, nor should the captain of industry or the laborer at his work prosecute his duty tasks that he may acquire means to be used solely for his own selfish desires.

Everyone has something that someone else needs and must have, writes Dr. James E. Freeman in an exchange. Any thing that we possess of wealth, talent or genius that will in any wise enrich the world or our neighbor, must be brought into service. There are rich poor men and poor rich men. The former have so depleted their emotions and finer impulses as to render their hearts as stone. The latter have so used the few or small gifts they have as to make them valuable.

Forty protesting Englishmen are credited with the intention of sailing from England in quest of an island home in the South seas where they can be free from fiscal oppression. Most of them are said to be club men, while the soberer of these political pilgrims will sell the Spanish Main rigged up with all the comforts of a cabin on board. They believe that their home will be on the Marquesas, familiar, more or less, through Robert Louis Stevenson's journeys. It is a well-considered plan of protecting communities, however, that the conditions they would most like to escape are the very ones which they set up under the new regime, says Christian St John Broadhurst. The proper time to judge the latest offerings from communism will be when they begin to impose the taxes necessary to meet the economic demands of the new regime.

ler, the way ought to be cleared for such trout-season legislation as would be agreeable to all concerned. It gets down to Windham county, practically, and Windham county has some problems more or less peculiar to its own streams and valleys. The chief trouble is, however, that Windham county sportsmen want a special set of laws and a special set of privileges for their own pleasure—and let the rest of the state go hang!

They don't say this in so many words; they aren't quite so crude as all that comes to, and, to be perfectly fair, it ought to be said that, considering the trifling difference between the North and South, there is quite a surprising difference in good fishing periods in Windham and Chittenden counties, for example. There is even considerable difference between the dates when fishing begins good in Rutland and Windham counties.
